

EXHIBIT 1

CRAZY Report for Kelley Abogado-Prepared by Dr. Taylor Tenorio Thompson

Z-Protein Analysis

- Blood tested August 15, 2008
- High levels of Z-protein (.53 mcg per ml/blood; normal range is .05-.2 mcg per ml)
- Strong likelihood of recent episode of extreme physiological stress.
- Stressful episode likely occurred within past three months.

The Z-Protein Analysis is consistent with someone who has recently experienced an Extremely high level of physiological stress. The test does not indicate the type of stress, and it is important to remember that stress can come from a variety of sources—family life, work environment, and financial concerns, just to name a few. Although this analysis cannot determine what caused Abogado to be under extreme stress, it does indicate that the stress was above and beyond what would be considered normal stress for an average adult.

Psychological Indicators

- IQ Test: 136 (Above average intelligence; two standard deviations above the mean)
An “Intelligence Quotient” test is a standard, though imperfect, measure of human intelligence. An average intelligence is indicated by a score of 100. A score of 150 indicates a person who is commonly referred to as “a genius.”
- Personality Type: “A” high need for control, Tense, Impatient, Aggressive
Personality typing is a generalization of how one examines and processes life events.
- Meyers-Briggs Type Indicator: ESTJ (Extrovert, Sensing, Thinking, Judging)
The Meyers-Briggs Type Indicator analyzes personality on a scale with four dimensions. The test is commonly used to determine how a subject processes life information. It can be a useful gauge to see how a person communicates within a group setting. Abogado is strongly typed as an up-front, take-charge person who depends on logic and consistency and prefers making decisive judgments.
- Stress Tolerance Scale: 4.2

The Stress Tolerance Scale measures a person’s reaction to stressful situations. It is measured on a scale of 1-10, where a score of “1” indicates an individual whose body is extremely tolerant of stressful situations. A score of “5” is considered an average score for a mentally competent adult. A score of “10” would indicate someone who is severely intolerant of stressful situations—someone who is subject to frequent, severe anxiety attacks.

Abogado’s Psychological Indicators are unusual. Abogado is highly intelligent and exhibits the need to be in charge of life. This is consistent with the personality of many lawyers, particularly District Attorneys, who are generally focused, driven, and fully absorbed in their work life. Abogado’s Myers-Briggs results are also in keeping with this personality type. The striking aspect of his psychological profile, however, is Abogado’s score on the Stress Tolerance

Scale. Generally, type A personalities such as this one do not process stress well. They are easily overwhelmed, especially when faced with personal or professional setbacks. Abogado actually exhibits a slightly better than normal tolerance for situations of stress.

Personal Evaluation

Although I ordinarily prefer a one-on-one interview with patients, I met with Abogado and Abogado's attorney for the personal evaluation portion of the test. We met on December 10, 2008, in Mr. Abogado's home where he was confined as a requirement of the bond. I found Abogado to be appropriately anxious, giving the gravity of the situation faced. Abogado also seemed genuinely remorseful for the role in the death of Day. Abogado relayed to me the events of April 21, 2008. It is easy to see the stress that faced, and I believe that the disappointment of the trial's outcome, in conjunction with the shock of the allegation leveled by Abogado's daughter against Day was sufficient to "trump" Abogado's natural ability to process high levels of stress, resulting in a bout of transient loss of impulse control.

Conclusions

Considering the results of Abogado's Z-Protein analysis, psychological indicators, and my personal evaluation, I conclude with 79% rate of confidence that Abogado experienced a period of time on April 21, 2008 in which Abogado was unable to appreciate the wrongful nature of its actions.

Dr. Taylor Thompson

Date:

Note to Attorneys: Absent extenuating circumstances, Dr. Thompson will only testify in court on behalf of clients who receive a ranking with an 80% certainty or higher. Court testimony starts at $250/hr. In the event that extenuating circumstances do arise, Court testimony is $500.00/hr. with a $5,000.00 minimum per day charge. All charges are non-refundable.

EXHIBIT 2

NATIONAL CRIME INFORMATION CENTER (NCIC)

Name: Day, Jesse Q.

Date of Incident: July 3, 1987

Location: Portland, Oregon

Current: Saipan, CNMI

Charge: Sexual Molestation of a Minor

Disposition: Held in Abeyance; Open Matter

EXHIBIT 3
Curriculum Vitae of Taylor Tenorio Thompson

Name: Taylor Tenorio Thompson, M.D.
Forensic Psychiatry Research Center
Address: Insanity Research Institute, University of San Francisco, 73096 Fulton Ave,
Building A, San Francisco, CA 91572

Education:

Undergraduate

Trinity College: B.A. with honors received in May, 1973

Graduate

University of California M.D. and Ph.D. degrees awarded in May, 1978

Postdoctoral Training:

Internship:

Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, 21201
First year resident in internal medicine July, 1988 to June, 1989
Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, 21205
Fellow in the Department of Neurology, August, 1988

Residency:

Department of Psychiatry, University of California, Santa Barbara (UCSB)
School of Medicine, La Jolla, California, 92037
Senior Resident on the Forensic Psychiatrist research team.
Center at the San Barbara Veterans Affairs Medical Center
July 1989 - June 1992

Fellowship:

Department of Veterans Affairs
Research Training in Psychiatry Fellow
Department of Psychiatry, UCSB School of Medicine and Competency Research
Center at the Santa Barbara Veterans Affairs Medical Center
July 1992 - June 1994

Licensure

1988; 2000-Present CNMI License Registration No. 99-99-107-AA
1990- Present California License Registration No. A-44777
1994- Present Diplomat, American Board of Forensic Psychiatry

Academic Appointments:

Assistant Professor In-Residence, Department of Psychiatry, USA School of Medicine, July
1994 - September 1998

Associate Professor of Psychiatry, University of San Francisco, College of Medicine
October 1998 – Present
September 2006 – With Tenure

Assistant Professor in the Forensic Sciences Program
1998 – Present

Hospital Appointments:

Director, Dual Diagnosis Treatment Program
Pleasantville VA Medical Center
July 1994 - September 1998

Director, Forensic Psychiatry Division
Department of Psychiatry, USF and VA Medical Center
October 1998 to 2006

Awards and Honors:

2006 –2008 Chairman, Clinical Treatment and Competency Evaluations Subcommittee of the National Institute on Forensic Psychiatry

2005-2007 Selectee, America's Top Psychiatrists, Criminal Defendant Evaluator:
Consumers' Research Council of America.

EXHIBIT 4

The following was recorded on the answering machine of Riley Lee at 4:25 p.m. on April 21, 2008. The voice is that of Kelley Abogado.

I'm going up on Lee Roof getting Riled up...hey, bud, ...Come on now, who do you, who do you, who do you, who do you think you are...hahaha...bless your soul...you really think you're in control...This is the end...my only friend, the end...cause their coming to take me away...haha...hehe...haha ...a man-eater...he'll only come out at night...Seguro que han oído que yo soy educado...rica...father, mother...yes,...I want to...well you starve a fever and you drown a cold...

END OF RECORDING.

EXHIBIT 5

NARRATIVE STATEMENT ADDENDUM TO POLICE REPORT PREPARED BY DETECTIVE SMITH-JONES

I received a call from dispatch to report to 123 Wisteria Lane for a suspected homicide. I knew that address so I immediately raced to that address. Upon my arrival, the front door of the house was open and crying was easily heard. I proceeded into the dwelling after announcing my presence and intention on entering. I went to the kitchen which is where the wailing was coming from. I first saw Bobbie on her knees cradling Jesse Day's head. Bobbie was repeatedly crying out "Oh God, Oh God, Oh God". I saw Kelley Abogado kneeling with Abogado's clothing covered in blood. I was able to immediately identify Kelley as I had been involved with Abogado on many prosecutions. A bloody kitchen knife was lying just to the right of the suspect's right hand.

The suspect was muttering very low and making guttural sounds with a strange expression on its face, almost like a smile. The suspect looked at me and said "here's to good friends, the night is kind of special..." and then snapped out of the strange expression. The suspect became very belligerent, demanding to know why suspect was handcuffed. Suspect kept demanding to speak to the Attorney General. I said "you know the drill" and put suspect in the back of the squad car. After awhile the suspect stopped talking altogether and sat motionless in a chair with a vacant expression on face.

The suspect was transported to headquarters. En route, the suspect freely talked to me without being questioned. Suspect stated that suspect believed that Jesse Day had molested suspect's child and that suspect didn't know what happened. I began to believe suspect until I saw the smirk on suspect's face after I said "I could see me doing the very same thing if I thought that my little girl had been touched." Suspect never said another word to me until we reached the station and then suspect "lawyered up." Abogado was then booked and processed into the system.

